1. The Peenemuende (N 55/P 83) airfield was still occupied by about sixty fighters.
2. Two radio trucks, one with an extended antenna rod about 25 feet high, were standing in a paddock, about 1,600 feet south of the Karlshagen (N 55/P 92) road check-point 500 feet west of the main road. A horizontal main rod, about 30 mm in diameter, was on top of the mast. From this rod, seven rods, each about 10 mm. in diameter, branched off to both sides. Their tops were interconnected by antenna wire. (See Annex 4).
3. A radio truck with trailer was about 160 feet north of the road check-point, west of the main road. A vertical and tapering antenna rod, about 15 feet high, and a slanting antenna rod, about 5 feet high, were fixed on the roof of the radio truck. From plugs on the trailer, wires led, via insulators, to poles, about 3 feet high, which were arranged in a semicircle at a radius of about 6 feet (see Annex 5).
4. A building to which all surrounding telephone wires led stood 600 feet north of the Karlshagen officers' settlement, at the branch road leading to the destroyed V-weapon plant. A ticking presumably originating from teletypes, was continually heard coming from within the buildings.
5. Trucks with mounted searchlights were repeatedly observed. The following truck [REDACTED] were seen in the restricted area: 25X1C
6. Documents containing the [REDACTED] and the 25X1C censorship unit [REDACTED] were found in the 25X1C off-limits area between 7 and 9 November 1949. (See Annexes 1 through 3).

Comment:

a. The number of aircraft observed approximately agreed with a previous report dated 4 October 1949*. According to previous reports it is assumed that three fighter regiments are stationed in Peenemuende and the total number of aircraft in Peenemuende is assumed to be higher than reported here. It is probable that not all aircraft at the field were observed.

b. The information is para. 4 confirms previous reports that the former V-weapon test station is destroyed. No information has been received indicating that the test station is being reconstructed.
